LIVESTOCK AND PRODUCTS
1981 U.S. TRADE

FLM 1-82
March 1981

Livestock and Products Show Positive Trade Balance in 1981

Summary

Based on preliminary numbers, U.S. exports of livestock, meat, and livestock products (excluding poultry) exceeded imports in 1981 by about $307 million. In fact, while imports declined almost $325 million from the 1980 value, U.S. exports grew about $150 million. This marks the first time since 1977 that the United States has experienced a positive balance of trade in the livestock, meat, and livestock products category.

This positive balance occurred during 1981 in spite of a generally stronger U.S. dollar which discouraged exports. Higher U.S. interest rates and general lack of economic vigor, on the other hand, discouraged imports. Total red meat trade, while remaining negative, saw a narrowing of the deficit. U.S. beef and veal exports, mainly high quality beef, saw an increase for the seventh straight year, while imports, mostly used as manufacturing beef, showed a decline for the second straight year. Pork, witnessing increased imports, also experienced a greater increase in exports. By-products, particularly variety meats, continued their upward trend, adding greatly to the total export gain, while hides and skins continued to be a $600 million net export earner.

Exports

Exports of live animals, red meats (including variety meats), and hides and skins increased in 1981 in total quantity and value. Only tallow and grease, and furskins showed declines, but their significance still remained large as export items.

Fresh and frozen beef and veal exports increased about $45 million in 1981. Canada accounted for about $9 million of the increase. Japanese and European Community (EC) increases can be attributed largely to concessions received in the multilateral trade negotiations. U.S. exports of beef to Japan, our largest beef market, reached nearly $160 million of fresh and frozen beef and veal in calendar year 1981.

Fresh and frozen pork exports increased almost 17,000 tons and almost $60 million. Japan, taking over 12,000 tons more than in the preceding year, continued as our largest buyer. After Japan cut its breeding herd in 1980 and obtained smaller litters from fewer sows, its swine cycle turned down in 1981. The result has been fewer hogs for slaughter and larger pork imports.

Variety meats continued their overall upward gains; however, better price values favored beef over pork. As a result, beef varieties, particularly offals other than tongues and livers, increased in both quantity and value. Pork declined in quantity but gained in total value. Japan remained our No. 1 buyer of beef variety meats by value, while France stayed first in quantity. For pork varieties, the United Kingdom became the primary buyer in both quantity and value, jumping ahead of West Germany.

Tallow and grease exports declined about $27 million, but still remained quite impressive at $700 million in total exports. The decline in inedible tallow exports accounted for most of the reduction, with China, Taiwan, Japan, and Korea buying almost $50 million less. This approximately 36-percent decline in Far Eastern purchases from the United States is partly the result of a shift from inedible tallow and lard to edible product use, the increasing competitiveness of palm oil, and the substitution of vegetable oils in food use.

Hides and skins exports increased almost $10 million. Declines in cattle hide sales were more than offset by increases in calf and kip skins. Sales increases occurred as major buying countries worked off some of the accumulated inventory of late 1980 and early 1981.

Live animal exports increased in value by about $40 million. Canada, after lifting its DES certification requirement on October 27, 1980, was particularly attracted to the abundance of overfed cattle on the U.S. market. Canada's cattle industry in 1981 witnessed low-market prices and restricted cattle feeding for most of the year. This was a result of above-average grain prices that encouraged imports of heavyweight cattle and high-quality beef.

Swine exports were particularly strong to Mexico after a late winter/early spring herd liquidation occurred there because of reduced feed supplies. Mexico began rebuilding its herd by purchasing swine from the United States.

Furskin exports declined in 1981 because of the slackening economies in several major markets and the strength of the U.S. dollar.

Imports

Live animals and their meat products showed a decline in imports in 1981; whereas wool, hides and skins, and furskins showed an increase. Overall, the value of imported livestock, meat and livestock products declined about $325 million in 1981, compared with 1980.

Beef and veal imports declined almost $373 million, and, on a product weight basis, almost 100,000 tons in 1981 from previous year levels. Demand for imported fresh, chilled, and frozen beef, despite its relatively low price, declined for the second successive year. U.S. consumers, continuing to feel squeezed economically, opted for more poultry in their diets at the expense of beef and pork. Prepared and preserved beef and veal imports also declined, but only by a very small amount.

The quantity of pork imports declined in 1981 from the 1980 level, but the amount was minimal; however, value increased over $7 million. While U.S. imports of pork from Canada declined about 1,000 tons, Canada still remained the No. 1 U.S. supplier of fresh, chilled, and frozen pork by virtue of a favorable exchange rate. Pork imports from Poland, consisting mostly of canned hams and shoulders, declined substantially. After reaching about 41,000 tons of ham-shoulder exports in 1980, U.S. imports from Poland declined to about 25,000 tons in 1981. Most of this decline occurred in the last half of the year as a result of unrest and work stoppages in Poland.

Nearly offsetting the decline in Polish exports was a gain by Denmark of almost 12,000 tons. However, while the Polish decline in exports came mostly in (boned and cooked) canned pork, the Danish increase was about equally divided between boned and cooked, canned pork, and frozen pork. Pig numbers in Denmark during 1981 were at an all-time high, and exports of pork to the United States were assisted by the strong dollar and EC subsidies.

Wool imports increased about 8,000 tons in 1981. With prices generally increasing, total value increased about $40 million. Several countries made large percentage increases in exports to the United States, but starting from a small base. Australia and Argentina, however, made the largest gains.

Australia, the largest supplier in 1980, increased its exports to the United States in 1981 by almost 3,000 tons (clean basis) and $23 million. Argentina, the third largest supplier in 1980, increased its exports to the United States in 1981 by just over 2,000 tons (clean basis) and almost $10 million. This occurred apparently from increased consumer demand for finer quality wool apparel such as suits, and from a large military contract for fine wool that covered the domestic supply.

Hides and skins imports increased about 15 percent in 1981 to reach about $100 million. Dry sheep and lambskins and whole cattle hides showed noticeable gains. France, the United Kingdom, and Ireland made the most impressive gains, but combined, these countries did not come close to the Canadian total of $24 million.

Furskin imports increased over 18 percent, reaching about $168 million in value. Raw undressed mink and fox accounted for most of the increase. Raw mink imports from Denmark increased over $14 million in 1981, while those from Finland increased over $6 million. Canada, a large supplier in 1980, lost almost $7 million in sales to the United States.

Live cattle imports by the United States declined in both number and value. The decline in feeder cattle imports, about 12,000 in number and $24 million in value, accounted for half of the decline, with heavyweight cattle, numbering about 18,000 and $17 million in value, accounting for the remainder. Canada and Mexico, the main suppliers of feeder cattle to the United States, dropped about equally as non-fed numbers increased in the United States and demand for feeders showed a decline.

Canada's heavyweight cattle exports declined about 18,000 head in 1981. As a result of relatively expensive feed supplies during much of 1981, Canada's feeding operations did not produce as many heavyweight animals as in previous years. Buyers instead turned somewhat to the United States for their purchases.
